

Malik Sullivan

Malik is attending Babson University where he wants to study Brand/Sports Marketing, Accounting and Entrepreneurship. He has served in numerous community organizations including sharing his basketball prowess as a mentor for children at the Back2Basics Academy after-school program, which uses basketball to work with kids at all levels to develop basic life skills. Malik also volunteers with Harlem Mothers SAVE, a nonprofit for parents who have lost a child to gun violence, and at the Harlem Center for Nursing and Rehabilitation. In addition to his academic and athletics achievements, Malik is very involved in his church community, serving as President of the Christian Parish for Spiritual Renewal teen group as well as other church activities. Malik's community involvement manifests his strong interest in justice, as also evidenced by his summer internship in the New York Criminal Courts. He is a graduate of The Beacon School.
